Mrs. W. W. Jones entertained Friday at her home with an afternoon party honoring her daughter, Billy Jean's thirteenth birthday. The rooms in which the guests assembled were decorated with spruce, arborvitae and hankers rose. After a number of games and contests in which Inman, Rushing, Edsel Zetterow and Billy Bragg were prize winners, they were ushered into the dining room to sing the happy birthday song while marching around the table on the center of which was the pretty birthday cake beautifully decorated and holding thirteen candles. Ice cream cones were served.

But they didn't stop there. They figured around with plastics and before long came up with plastic insides that give ventilation to the feet. The insole is made of five layers of plastic, four of which are made of mesh and the other fine. These insoles permit the soldier's feet to "breathe" and keep down the perspiration in hot and humid climates — like the South Pacific — eliminating to a great extent athlete's foot. The insoles may be kept fresh. All that's necessary is to remove them from the shoes, wash them with soap and water and let 'em dry.

Eleven Canning Plants in Berrien County

In the eleven Berrien county food preservation centers under the supervision of Miss Margaret Thompson, county home demonstration agent, 49,426 cans of food stuffs were preserved during 1943. Home club members canned 46,125 quarts at home.

Some Georgia County To Get Cotton Trophy

NO POINTS NEEDED FOR THESE FARMERS

Mrs. Mamie E. King, Brantley county home demonstration agent, reports that farm families in her county are not having to use ration stamps for the purchase of meats, fats, vegetables and fruits.

DEMONSTRATION AGENT HINTS MEAL PLANNING

Meal planning is an important phase of 4-H club work for older girls in Paulding county. Miss Kathleen Wilson, home demonstration agent, reports. Correct food habits are being emphasized in the club meetings.

SEED TREATMENT IS IMPORTANT MATTER

Cotton seed should be treated before planting to kill disease germs that may be on the outside of the seed, and provide a coat of chemical to protect seed from decay by fungus that may be in the soil, the agricultural extension service says.

POLLED HEREFORD BREEDERS TO MEET

One of the outstanding events in purebred cattle circles in the southeast is the show and sale of registered Polled Hereford cattle at Moultrie, Ga., on March 22nd, when members of the Southeastern Polled Hereford Association parade more than seventy head of choice bulls and females before the judges, each hoping that his entry may win the grand championship, or at least some of the ribbons. The show feature, according to T. D. Mathews, Alachua, Fla., president of the association, will begin at 10 a. m. and the auction sale at 1:00 p. m. EWT, with Tom McCord as auctioneer. A special feature of the show, according to H. McDowell, secretary of the association, will be The Challenger, $7,000 Polled Hereford Bull owned by a prominent Georgia breeder. This bull was sired by Advance Domino 30th, a bull that sold for $12,000.

In connection with the press release above mentioned, we wish to announce that we have entered ten animals in this sale, including a great, proved sire, a dandy eight months-old hard sire prospect, and eight good females, six open and two bred, including sister of The Challenger. We were fortunate enough to win the reserve and the grand championship in the female division in this association last spring, and we think that the two we are offering in this sale as good (though the other fellow's may be better) as our champion of last year. See them in this sale, or if you are unable to attend it, see them at our farm, along with a number of good young bulls that we have for sale.

JAPS DID SERVICE TOUCHING RUBBER

Uncle Sam's Soldiers Now Given Better Shoes Since Rubber Has Been Shut Off

Atlanta, March 6.—When the Japs knocked off America's supply of crude rubber they did one good turn for Uncle Sam's soldiers by being the means of the GI's ultimately getting better shoes.

Sounds crazy, but there are records at headquarters of Fourth Service Command to prove it, and this is the way it was: When the United States was forced into the job of knocking the Nips around, the Army mushroomed and every mother's son had to have a couple pairs of shoes—and quick, plus replacements. Millions of pairs of shoes took a lot of leather and millions of Uncle Sam's nephews and nieces who weren't wearing khaki had to have shoes, too.

But the far-seeing quartermasters weren't as much worried about leather as about rubber, so everybody, officers and industrial chemists, got to tinkering around with concoctions that might turn out to be good synthetic rubber. Finally something was produced that they claimed was plenty tough, so the quartermasters made some shoe soles out of it, sewed them on a few thousands pairs of shoes and started tests to see how long they would last. Soldiers marched over all kinds of terrain, waded mud, climbed rocky mountains and trudged over desert sands. The result was that after they'd kept piling one test on top of another, it developed that, as a shoe sole, there was practically no wear-out to the stuff.

Now all GI regular issue shoes have the synthetic soles and heels that outlast many times the shoes with the traditional leather sole—and the soldiers say they are more comfortable.

But they didn't stop there. They figured around with plastics and before long came up with plastic insoles that give ventilation to the feet.

The insole is made of five layers of plastic, four of which are made of mesh and the other fine. These insoles permit the soldier's feet to "breathe" and keep down the perspiration in hot and humid climates — like the South Pacific — eliminating to a great extent athlete's foot. The insoles may be kept fresh. All that's necessary is to remove them from the shoes, wash them with soap and water and let 'em dry.

Between Us

It was all just a case of mistaken identity of a voice over the phone which gave lovely Mrs. Lynes (wife of Capt. Lynes of the ASP at the college) an invitation for dinner on a certain Saturday night recently. She and Mrs. Sappenfield, whose husband is among the Stars at the college, are very close friends. The invitation was extended and accepted, and Mrs. Lynes and her children went to the Sappenfield apartment on the dot. They were very graciously received by the hostess, and after some time spent in conversation Mrs. Sappenfield decided she knew what had happened, so she went into the kitchen and in a short while had a nice meal ready to be served her guests. After staying awhile after dinner, Mrs. Lynes went home. No sooner had she gotten in the house than the phone rang. A voice on the line said, "Where have you been? We have been trying to get you and find out why you didn't come to dinner." Well, that's the whole story in a nutshell. But one as gracious as Mrs. Sappenfield didn't let her guest know but that the meal has been especially planned for the hostess, and that the story is almost as good as that of the other young matron who went to the Herrington-Hay party at the Women's Club and waited for the guests to arrive, thinking maybe they had said four-thirty instead of four. After waiting some time she heard her husband and found the party was at Cecil's and made it there not too late. This delightful evening is passing the time for the young ladies, and if you doubt it just take a look about. The zazzles in the T. W. Rowse yard are beautiful and hardly any direction you go you don't see them in full bloom. A steady stream of people viewed the tap which was being played this week. One grown negro girl came running back to the place she works telling they had two tap prisoners in the sub. But anyhow, it thrilled not only the older people but the children as well, after all these days they are about as well read as the older people. Little Ann Waters and Ann Remington dock the town in the Waters cart and pony dressed like twins in identical black suits and both with long honeyed tresses. Virginia Lee Floyd's pony does not behave as well as some of the others, and she was warning the other riders not to come too close and get her son, Jack Jr., of Millen sent to the grocer with her mother, Mrs. S. C. Groover.

CENTRAL HEAD IS TUESDAY SPEAKER

Vice-President Wise Talks To Chamber of Commerce Members at Regular Dinner

One of the highlights of the Chamber of Commerce under its newly re-instituted program was the regular luncheon occasion Tuesday when Vice-President Marion J. Wise, of the Central of Georgia, was guest speaker and when among the honor guests were the fifteen or more boys comprising the Stillson basketball team of the Stillson High School who recently at the state meet in Macon won second honors in the grade B schools of Georgia. With Vice-President Wise were a half dozen or more members of his office personnel who accompanied him from Savannah. Escorting the basketball boys was their coach and superintendent, S. A. Driggers, of the Stillson High School. With that large number of guests there was also an unusually large attendance of members, and the dining room facilities of the Norris Hotel, where the dinner was served, were taxed to overflowing, with improvised tables spread in the hall.

President L. S. Simmons, presiding, welcomed the guests and introduced personally the members of the basketball squad.

President Simmons also presented the guest speaker, who had come at the urgent solicitation of the program committee and who brought a thoroughly prepared address dealing with the past, the present and future of the district.

Quoting briefly from the address: "About a month ago I read in the Atlanta Journal an article concerning Bulloch county and its plans for the post-war period."

"It was very much impressed with the contents of that article. It aroused my interest in your problems and your future. I am sure that you are a very progressive planning committee and your abundant natural advantages, I believe you are justly entitled to. The future, so far as I am concerned, is not a matter of hope, but of confidence."

"The three absolute essentials for man's living and physical well-being are food, shelter and the wherewithal to clothe himself. All other activities, so far as his material wants are concerned, are merely collateral. In a community such as this, you are directly associated with these three essentials."

"It is upon the labor of your community and the similar situation of our population, that the balance of the county is dependent for its very existence. This being so, then this element of our population and the industry they represent have, measured by percentage, the largest stake in the great country of ours. It, therefore, appears axiomatic that upon their well and progress depends that of the rest of the nation."

"If my information is correct, you will find that the Chamber of Commerce is a very real and useful organization."

DAIRY PROJECT SEEMS ASSURED

DAIRY PROJECT SEEMS ASSURED

Four Hundred Cows In Bulloch Have Been Listed For Foremost Dairies

(By BYRON DYER)

Some 400 cows have been listed for milking for the proposed full milk market for Statesboro.

This fact was made known Saturday during a mass meeting called at the court house to determine just how much interest there was in dairy farming in the county. The Foremost Dairies Company wanted to know to just what extent the Bulloch county farmers needed a market for their milk before going ahead with their proposed plant for Statesboro. The plant they have outlined for Statesboro would provide for distribution of whole milk, and many of the various forms of processed dairy products such as ice cream, butter, condensed milk, cheese, as well as some of the newer products now known that can be made from milk. It would be adequate enough in size to move all the milk the farmers in this section would ever produce.

Alfred Dorman called the meeting after discussing the situation with the county and city officials and the various city clubs. He presided at the meeting and urged every farmer in the county to plan to milk a few cows.

Fred W. Hodges, chairman of the county commissioners, pledged the county's full co-operation with the project, and recommended that the farmers group into the milk production rather than to jump into it. It was his idea that milk should be just what the farmer needs rather than to take the place of any of the present money crops the farmers now have.

Dr. R. J. Kennedy, president of the Bulloch County Bank, placed the opportunity at the side of tobacco and urged the same co-operation the tobacco industry was given.

C. P. Olliff, president of the Sea Island Bank, expressed the belief that in the future local farmers would be glad to have the income from milk. He pointed out that this regular monthly income would help bridge over many dark days that are sure to follow this war.

C. B. McAllister, of the Sea Island Bank, made a statement vouching for the financial stability of the proposed new industry.

D. B. Turner, editor of the Times, felt that there was a place in such a county as Bulloch for the dairy enterprise. He discussed some of the problems he had seen come and go and how he had watched the dairying progress in other sections.

The more than 200 farmers present endorsed the project, wholeheartedly and expressed the belief that ample milk could be produced to warrant the project.
